2001 – A SpaceComm Odyssey

As we venture into the new millennium, our reliance on all types of communications and information increases. In the business of space, we find ourselves leading the fight into the next great battlefield - cyber space.

This evolving mission area presents opportunities and challenges we had only imagined a few years ago. We invite you to join us as we embark on this new journey by being part of SpaceComm 2001, where government and industry representatives will be discussing the issues that we face in the new age of cyber space, information operations and space communications.
